

The why, how & what of fraud orchestration

1

Why Fraud Orchestration

To unite and complete fraud prevention.

So fraud investigators, compliance officers and CxO's can accelerate better-informed decisions based on all risk signals, event and customer data, delivering higher protection and customer experience.

Typical fraud prevention today

Fraudsters (internal and external) are taking advantage of vulnerabilities created by disconnected tools. This siloed approach to fraud prevention reduces the ability to fight fraud fully and effectively. As a result fraud prevention is lengthy, inefficient and costly coupled with increased customer friction.

Fraud prevention Silos are a fraudsters friend. They themselves have no boundaries, they operate across countries and departments
